People do not usually understand what power they have to change the world, thinking they have not got any weight in making decisions and being not sure about their importance for others. That is what I am going to talk about.

In my opinion, it is not that hard to make the world better, you just have to take actions towards it. It is about your attitude to different things. You should always be kind to others and spread the kindness around you, making other people feel good and cheerful. For example, you can go volunteering and help disabled people with their healthcare, or help ^{the} homeless with ~~their~~ ~~needs~~ finding food and home. You can also get an education and find a job where you could create some new helpful technologies and maybe even make breakthroughs. For example, if you were a doctor, you could help people to cure from different illnesses and diseases, work on some new methods and technologies in medical sphere. You can also become a teacher and teach children knowledge that would help them in their future lives.

To conclude, I want to say that you need to become something that you want to see in the world without waiting for anything to happen. You just got to take actions ~~forwards~~ and move forward your goals, and you will eventually achieve them, st because ~~the~~ nothing is impossible if there is a will.
